TECO-Westinghouse Motor Company partners with SiteGoals for Web site redesign

AUSTIN, TX – Feb. 26, 2009 - TECO-Westinghouse, a world-wide leader in electric motor manufacturing, has chosen local web design company SiteGoals to conduct its multi-phase Web site redesign.

SiteGoals has completed the first phase of the project by designing a user-friendly Web interface that provides company and product information with minimum page clicks.

“Our new Web site will help TECO-Westinghouse better satisfy our customers’ needs and maintain our position as a market leader,” said Ernest Goto, the company’s marketing director.

TECO-Westinghouse is a global company headquartered in Round Rock, Texas with more than 100 years of experience. Its motors and generators are used in the military and in the petroleum, chemical, paper, mining, marine propulsion, steel and electric utility industries throughout the world.

TECO-Westinghouse carries a full line of induction, synchronous and DC motors available from ¼ HP to 100,000 HP and offers engineering and repair services.

The company’s home state leads the nation in wind energy generation, and TECO-Westinghouse recently “launched into the emerging wind energy industry, making it the only wind turbine manufacturer in Texas,” Amy Stansbury wrote in Round Rock’s Community Impact.

SiteGoals is a growing, six-year old, Web development firm that specializes in Web site design and development, application programming and interactive design. The company was founded in 2003 by Simon Erich and Mark Hill with a vision of providing high caliber design and development services without the agency “dog and pony show”. Today, SiteGoals continues to provide a wide range of Web design and development services to clients such as, The Good Sam Club, Ballet Austin and the Acton School of Business.

SiteGoals will officially re-launch TECO-Westinghouse’s new Web site on March 13th, at www.tecowestinghouse.com.
